. There are two grave objections to any consideration of these boards, or commissions, as tariff advisers. In the first place, neither the trade commission nor the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce has the time to devote to a complete study of the question. Furthermore, there is a question as to the power which the trade commission possesses, and many doubt that its functions comprise those of tariff experts. Another objection, and one that has a distinct pearing on the situation is that the bearing on the situation, is that the federal trade commission and the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce are not, in any sense of the word, non-partisan. A majority of the members of the federal trade word, non-partisan. A majority of the members of the federal trade commission are Democrats, and the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce is directly under the Democratic secretary of commerce and responsible to him. There is not the slightest suggestion of non-partisanship here in the sense that is suggested when a non-partisan tariff commission is discussed.

The president cannot content himself with the idea that he possesses a tariff commission now. He does not, and if the desirable to have a tariff commission some action will have to be taken by Songress to create a definitive tentance.

for that matter, as to the advisability of a tariff commission, its use and stackly considered to the description goes to the question of the destrability of a non-partisan tariff board. Correspondence between President Wisen and one of his friends, former Governor Cox, of Oho, indicates that the president has a general belief in the desirability of a board which will investigate the tariff and provide information for Congress. The president's letter is not very clear, but it conveys the impression that his idea of a tariff board has already been carried out in the powers granted to the federal trade commission and now exercised by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce.

Many of these Hats are now on display in our show windows.

Every one a new model—Styles that are the last minute in millinery fashions. The materials are the very newest and finest. If you are not interested in the purchase of a new hat now-come and see the very latest millinery styles. A pleasure to show you. Minninery parlors, first floor.

Join The Dress Making Class

The enrollment is growing daily -don't delay, enroll at once.

The New York School of Dressmaking will conduct a course at this time for four weeks, beginning October 12th, and ending November 8th.

The idea is one of economy and efficiency. More dresses and smarter dresses FOR LESS MONEY.

You buy the materials, and make the dress under the personal super-vision of an expert New York Dressmaker. You begin to make the garment with the first lesson. Each perplexing problem is solved as it is met. There is no class instruction, and the work is not made irksome by routine methods.

There are five sessions a day, and only seven pupils may be accommodated in each session, so that it will be necessary to enroll at once to be sure of the opportunity.

We shall be glad to have you ask us for further details.

$3.00 pays for the course consisting of six lessons.
